Woman at Bay is an English translation of Sibilla Aleramo's Una Donna, a novel which has been put into French, German, Russian, Spanish, and Swedish, and which made, when it appeared in the leading Italian magazine, Nuova Antologia, a profound impression upon the public, and was a storm-centre for vehement discussion. The novel with a purpose, if one except Cena s The Forewarners (Gli Ammonitori) and Fogazzaro's The Saint (Il Santo), now scarcely exists in Italy, where the popular novelists are content to make faithful transcripts of aristocratic, bourgeois, or peasant life; but this moving story belongs to that class of fiction. It is in the form of an autobiography of a young woman who seeks to escape from the brutalising yoke of a man to whom the severity of the Italian law regarding divorce binds her. Of the author of A Woman at Bay, who screens her identity under the pen-name of Sibilla Aleramo, Maria Pastore Mucchi (writing in Putnam's The Reader, July, 1908) says: "A magnetic and genial woman herself. Sibilla Aleramo infuses humanity and energy into the hearts of those who approach her. She is an apostle of ideas, which she not only spreads in writing, but also puts into actual practice, with an enlightened and practical propaganda. Besides this, without speaking of it to any one (and I record this for the first time), at Rome, where she lives, she gives her services freely to a hospital for infirm children, and, like the protagonist of her novel, has become a social mother."
