Good read!

By Charmz

This is not a book that is to be read as short stories, as it is full of factual opinions, proven truths, dated discoveries, etc. Each chapter covers one society or location, each chapter filled with facts and theories as to what may or could have occurred. Some of these civilizations have left clues behind to help us begin to figure out what happened, while others have left nothing at all for us to follow. It was truly interesting to read about cultures and societies that we know about through various means that disappeared without a record of why.

I found that the author had done his research, the book was enjoyable and informative and it was a great learning experience, which was a good thing.

I think the author takes more time in conducting research before having this book.

By Rouge E-Book Reader

Honestly upon reading and after reading this book I have little doubt as the authenticity of the write-ups inside. But granted that all the details and information inside are correct then I am happy having this one. The intention of the author is really great of sharing his knowledge to the readers.

Understanding the Future, by Studying the Past!

By Kindle Customer

"Lost Civilizations" is an exceptionally well written and organized book. The author has the ability to transfix the reader with excitement and awe regarding the level of advancement and sophistication of the host of lost civilizations that have been discovered and studied, and his belief that there are many more left to be discovered. Many people I know are under the impression that ancient cultures were primitive, violent, disease ridden, with people that were primitive, ignorant savages living in caves or hovels, when nothing could be further from the truth. The more you study the ancients you realize that our ancestors either developed or had access to technologies that rival and in some cases surpass those of today. The more I study the history of our ancient ancestors the more I find startling similarities between them and us. It is like a chain that link us, a chain forged by hopes, dreams, courage, hard work, ambition, spirituality, love, a desire for a better tomorrow for their children, in a word they are us. The more we study the past, read books like that of Mr. Phillips, I believe that we will better understand ourselves, how to improve our world. How to avoid their mistake and even what the future holds for us. Edwin C. Lowe, US Army (Civilian) Retired.
